GRAND JURY IN SESSION
Another Witness is Arrested For Refusal to Give Testimony
To Board

(By Universal Service)

CHICAGO, May 20.—The Shepherd-McIntock case today evolved into a mystery play that makes state thrillers pale into insignificance.

The disappearance of Robert White, one of the star witnesses for the state, held the center of the stage. It brought about a special session of the grand jury late this afternoon, at which witnesses connected with White's disappearance were summoned for questioning.

Arthur E. Byrne, a private investigator for the Shepherd forces, refused to testify, stating that he did not "want to hurt his employers."

He is alleged, in information given the state's attorney, to have arranged a meeting between White and Attorney W. W. O'Brien of Shepherd's counsel and a stenographer, following which White, his wife and two children left town.

Byrne's refusal to testify was followed by his arrest. He then was served with a new subpoena, calling for his appearance before the grand jury tomorrow.

WHITE STILL MISSING.

The report that White had been found in a downtown hotel was declared unfounded by State's Attorney Robert L. Crowe.

William Scott Stewart, chief counsel of Shepherd's defense, also denied that his operatives had knowledge of White's whereabouts, or that the defense had offered the state's witness $25,000 to disappear.

Coinciding with the rounding up of witnesses to whom White is said to have told of the alleged offer, detectives of the state's attorney's office today learned that William Adams, blind news vendor and alleged confidant of White, had been taken from his home early this morning by two men. These men, according to Mr. Crowe, were neither police nor State's Attorney's agents. Mrs. Adams, wife of the missing man, said her husband left without an explanation.

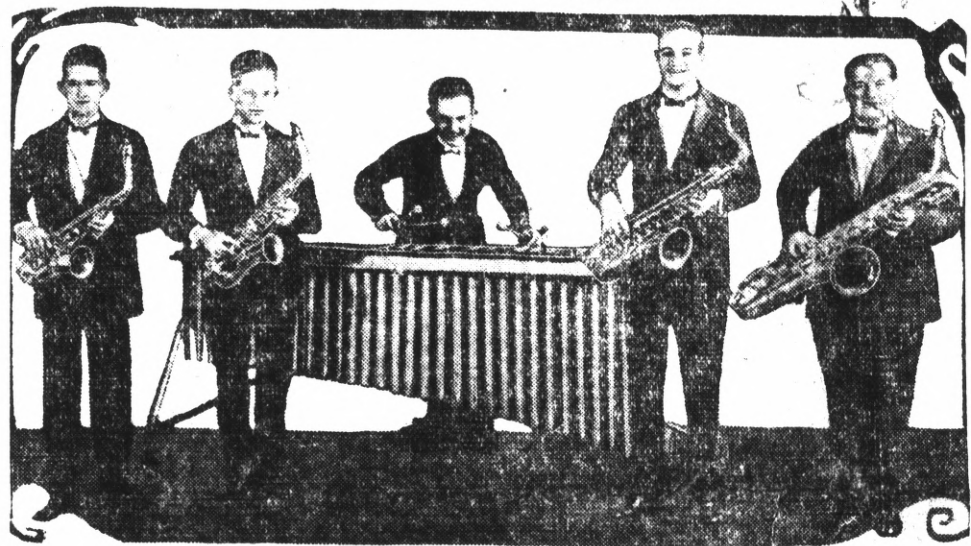

It was to Adams that White is said to have told of the alleged bribe, adding that "there is a bun-salaw awaiting me in Florida if they come through."

STORE BUILDING REMODELED

The two-story at 1124 Macdonald avenue is being remodeled by P. M. Sanford for Dr. W. M. Bullock, who intends to remodel the second floor, formerly used as a hall, into offices. Some of the improvements contemplated are a new plaster front, modern double windows, and a marble entrance. The same shoe shop that occupies the first floor now will not be changed.

Night of Brilliant Musical Entertainment Promised Chautauquans Maupin's Singing Band to Appear Here.

Novelty by clever talent, fun, merriment, stimulating jazz combined with pretentious numbers that reach the classical, will be the offering of the famous Maupin's Singing and Novelty Band on the final day of Chautauqua. Heading this combination of nine young men artists, each one a star performer, William L. Maupin, who became a distinct Chautauqua favorite when he directed Dunbar's White Huzzars, will give a program of band music, solo and ensemble singing, and minstrelsy which covers a wide and satisfying range in variety and quality of offerings. The individual stars in this unique organization will introduce many instruments, including saxophones, xylophones, trombones, cornets, piano and others, featuring solos, duets, trios and ensemble numbers. The costuming is colorful, tatty and extremely attractive. "The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," which made a sensation on the Chicago Century Roof Theater, taken from the Russian production Ballet's "Chauve Souris," is one of the sensational novelties introduced by the Maupin Band. This is one of the biggest hits on the American stage, and the Maupin organization is said by many others to outshine the original production in the act.

CHAUTAUQUA TO OPEN TONIGHT

THURSDAY.

Opening exercises and announcements, Chautauqua director, Packard Cartoon Comedy De-view, Alton Packard.

These cartoons, with songs to fit, are a big feature of the week. An evening of fun for old and young.

Place, Seventh and Nevil.
Time, 8 p. m.
Lasts seven days and evenings.

The last chance for the public to obtain season tickets to the Chautauqua, which opens at Seventh and Nevil at 8 o'clock this evening, will be up to that time today from any member of the Richmond Chautauqua association. A check-up of the condition was held at a meeting which took place in the chamber of commerce rooms last night, and everything is reported to be very satisfactory.

The last check-up will be made just before the opening of the program tonight at the tent, which was put up yesterday. Mrs. N. L. Nesbitt, secretary of the association, will be at the tent, where she will receive the final reports of the members.

Nearly all tickets have been sold, but there are a limited number yet available. Reserve seat tickets will be on sale at Richard's Melody shop from 2 to 4 p. m. today.

The chautauqua evening program will start at 8 p. m. sharp, while the afternoon presentation will start at 3:30 o'clock. The lateness of the hour of the afternoon performance is so that the children may attend after school hours. The junior chautauqua will be conducted immediately after the afternoon program.

With the trail of Joe Tanko lost in a maze of conflicting reports, police of the bay cities and Sacramento yesterday pinned their hopes of capturing the escaped convict on some new outbreak which they expected would make necessary.

His companion, Floyd Hill, was formally charged with the murder of Harry J. Litzberg, Sacramento merchant, when his attorneys attempted to gain his freedom through a habeas corpus writ.

Reports that Tanko was seen yesterday in San Francisco, Oakland and Sacramento, as well as in many smaller communities, kept the police of the State on wild goose chase which led nowhere.

Girls Hi Y Club Initiation of Officers Delayed

The installation of officers for the coming term in the Girls' H-Y club of the Y. M. C. A. did not take place last night as scheduled as the president, Miss Dorothy Barbikas, found it impossible to be in attendance. The installation was not held as the rest of the members felt it would not be well to go ahead without the cooperation of the president.

A business meeting was held instead and it was decided to call a special meeting for next Wednesday evening, and at that time installation will take place and Miss Barbikas will be presented with a beautiful gift in appreciation of her services during the term just past.

The meeting was held in conjunction with a dinner, and it was decided to hold another on next Wednesday.

TAR POT FIRE CAUSES ALARM

The moving of a tar pot and leaving the live coal burning in the fire used to melt the tar, resulted in a bright conflagration on Eleventh street, between Eleventh and Macdonald avenues last night.

The fire burned so high that a telephone alarm was sent to the Fire Department and was answered by Chemical No. 1, with Chief W. P. Cooper and Assistant Chief J. J. Perry in charge. The blaze was put out with portable damage done to property.

This alarm was turned in at 8:15 o'clock, just about an hour after the alarm for a fire in Point Richmond. These two fires brought the total of alarms sent in to the Fire department this month up to 5.

Chicago People Guests at Party

In honor of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Himes of Chicago who have moved to Richmond, Rev. Himes of the Grace Lutheran church, held a party attended by a large number of members of the church and their friends at his home last evening. Approximately 50 were in attendance and everyone greatly enjoyed the several musical selections of Miss Agnes Parker, and the entertainment of Con Bastin, who gave numerous musical numbers and comic skits. There were also several readings and games were indulged in. Delicious refreshments were served during the hours of the evening.

SHARP CUT IN S.P. AUTO FERRY FARE FORESEEN

State Railroad Commission's Engineers Reduce Valuation By Over Four Million

MAY REDUCE TO 75 CENTS

Investigation Started By Commission Itself has Lowered Golden Gate, Rodeo Fares

A sharp reduction in automobile ferry rates of the Southern Pacific company between San Francisco and Eastbay points was forecast yesterday from developments at a hearing before the state railroad commission in San Francisco, when the report of the commission's engineers was placed in evidence. It is thought likely that the present automobile fare of $1.05 will be reduced to 75 cents, possibly lower.

The extreme likelihood of these reductions is predicated upon the fact that the commission's engineers have reduced by more than four million dollars the historical cost of the ferry boat, terminals, etc., used in whole or in part for the transportation of automobiles between the Eastbay communities and San Francisco.

The commission's engineers, while they do not follow closely the system of figuring values adopted by the Southern Pacific as a basis for its present rate, have drawn up an elaborate report which is to be followed by a second report within a few days.

BOARD'S OWN MOYE.

The railroad commission started the present investigation into ferry fares for automobile carriers on its own motion. As a result of its inquiry the Golden Gate ferry rate between San Francisco and Sausalito, and the Rodeo-Vallejo ferry fare on automobiles, have been reduced.

The Southern Pacific company originally indicated the value of its properties devoted wholly or partly to automobile transportation at approximately $11,000,000. The commission fixes this value at $7,244,478, and less depreciation places it at $6,125,682. The reproduction cost today, the commission indicates, would be $8,652,518 less depreciation, $5,961,214.

Girl in Contest For Jingle Prize

Florence Moran, high ninth grade of Roosevelt Junior High school, turned in the following jingle for her contribution of advertising of the "Pirates of Hawaii," which will be presented at the school Friday night:

"The Pirates of Hawaii"
Come and see young Billy Wood.
Make love to Dorothy, dear.
The pirate chief and all his tribe,
Who never had known fear.

Come and see the capture
Of this fearless gang of crooks
By Miss Primer of a girls' school,
Who turned them into cooks.

This entertainment is delightful.

TRIAL OF "JAZZ GIRL" ON MURDER CHARGE EXPECTED TO START MONDAY IN S. F. COURT

IN SIGNED STATEMENT DOROTHY SAYS "JIMMY LAMAR"
MURDERED HER MOTHER BUT FURTHER DETAILS ARE WITHHELD

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20. (Universal Service)—In a report filed late today with Judge Londerback and District Attorney Matthew Brady, Dorothy Ellingson, 17-year-old matricide, was declared sane.

This means she must stand trial for the murder of her mother. The report was filed by Dr. Scandland, head of the Napa state hospital, and was signed by nine doctors at that institution who observed her.

The report was accompanied by a signed statement of the girl in which she accused "Jimmy Lamar" or murdering her mother.

The statement of Dr. Scandland and his associates said that they had observed every move of the girl since her incarceration in the state hospital and that they could come to but one conclusion and that was that she is sane.

Assistant District Attorney Harmon Skiffen announced that the girl would be returned to San Francisco as soon as necessary legal steps could be taken and that he would be ready to proceed with her trial on Monday if that date was agreeable to the court.

In addition to Dr. Scandland, the following physicians signed the report: Dr. C. W. Austin, Dr. J. C. Rogers, Dr. E. F. Lounsbury, Dr. O. D. Miller, Dr. G. A. Johnson, Dr. J. C. Kenne and Dr. R. M. Ritchey.

TWO REPORTS FILED.

Two reports were filed. The first was a brief one addressed to the district attorney. It said:

"In accordance with the directions contained in the commitment to this institution, the Napa State Hospital of Dorothy Ellingson, I hereby certify that in my opinion, the said Dorothy Ellingson is not insane."

This statement was signed by Dr. James Scandland.

The second statement was more full. It said:

"In the case of Dorothy Ellingson, a patient at this institution, having been committed and received at the institution on April 9, 1925, from the county of San Francisco, California, I desire to report that I have made every conscientious effort at my command to study deeply, closely and carefully the case of this patient. I have weighed and considered every bit of evidence obtainable and have given thought and consideration to the girl's acts, her conduct, her attitude, her habits and her mode and views of life. I have some over, but by her, her childhood and school days, her later life and habits, and considered her desires, her pleasures and visions, moods and emotions and her emotional life, her environment and training, her upbringing and inheritance and everything that I have been able to find. EVERY TEST EMPLOYED.

"Daily mental tests have been given, laboratory research employed, physical examinations made and constant observation of the patient day and night by nurses and doctors who are trained and expert psychiatrists. The medical staff of this institution I have consulted frequently, both individually and collectively, and find that all agreed as to the diagnosis of this case, and I have consulted with the girl's father, her teacher and her religious adviser. I have read the transcript of the testimony and the court records, and have been careful, I think, to take a sufficient length of time to study the history of the case and to reach but one conclusion—Dorothy Ellingson is not insane."

HISTORY OF CASE.
Dorothy Ellingson lived with her mother and brother, Earl, in a little Fourth avenue cottage. On January 12, last, Earl returned home in the evening from work and found his mother lying across her bed dead. Two shots had been fired into her body. Dorothy was missing. Two days later she was arrested and at first expressed surprise that her mother was dead. Later she confessed having slain her after a quarrel over "going out nights."

She admitted having attended a party the night after the killing and had been living at a rooming house.

She was brought to trial March 27. After a spectacular period of court sessions, during which she flouted daily, her attorneys halted the trial and demanded that a jury determine her sanity. This hearing started March 31 and on April 9 the jury declared her insane. She was immediately removed to the Napa hospital, where she has since been under observation.

Reichstag Gives Hindenburg Vote Of Reconciliation

(By Universal Service)

BERLIN, May 20.—The German Reichstag today seconded President Hindenburg's approval of the Luther-Stresemann cabinet and its policy of fulfillment of the Dawes plan and international reconciliation when, by a vote of 214 against 129, it gave the government a vote of confidence.

The significance of this vote is that the Nationalists have now followed the lead of President Hindenburg, finally committing themselves to a policy against which their leader, Count Westarp, voiced serious misgivings no later than yesterday.

The Socialists, while endorsing the Government's foreign policy for party and internal political reasons, joined the Communists and National Socialists in the vote against the Government—in fact, they introduced the motion for a vote of lack of confidence. The Democrats abstained from voting.

In a second motion for a vote of lack of confidence directed exclusively against Chancellor Luther and Foreign Minister Stresemann only the Ludendorffites joined with the Extreme Right, Lefts and Socialists.

AUTO STRIKES HORSE

A taxicab driven by Palin Church on the tank farm hill struck a horse ridden by A. Olivera, a farmer of Giant, yesterday and the rider received severe bruises on the head and body. The horse was badly torn about the hip and flanks.

For 25 years he served the late czar and held appointments in many of the principal cities in Europe and Orient. Once Central Western social circle, marveled at the beautiful jewels and gorgeous gowns displayed by his wife. He wants a job and would be pleased if he could secure work as an assistant cook as he knows a little of the culinary art.

As a result of old rags, soaked with oil, catching afire, the Richmond Fire department was called out last night at 7:30 o'clock to extinguish a blaze in the Grand Garage, located at Standard and Santa Fe avenues, Point Richmond.

Under the direction of Chief W. P. Cooper, and Assistant Chief J. J. Barry, Chemical No. 1, Truck No. 2, and Engines No. 1 and 2, answered the telephone alarm and soon had the fire under control. Only slight damage resulted from the conflagration.

The building is being occupied by S. Calandra, and is owned by Chausser Brothers of Point Richmond. All fire apparatus was back in service at 8:35 o'clock.

Foreign War Post Adopts Boy Scout Troop No. 1 Here

At a special meeting of Foreign War Post, No. 213, Veterans of Foreign Wars, held in Memorial hall last night for the purpose of discussing the Boy Scout question, it was decided to adopt Boy Scout Troop No. 1, and have it available at all times to carry the colors of the organization in parades and other functions. It was announced by Ray J. Wood, chairman of the convention committee, that plans are progressing very nicely for the convention and that the flags are meeting with nearly one hundred percent approval. He stated that almost the entire length of Macdonald avenue will be decorated with these flags on Memorial day.

On account of the central location of the Richmond Hotel and on account of the size of the lobby, it was decided to make this the headquarters of the convention. This will be the stopping place of all the head officers of the organization and they will transact all business there.

Cornerstone Layed Today By Pythians

On account of the unseasonable weather, the laying of the cornerstone in the Pythian home at Kenwood was again postponed from Tuesday to today. A large number of Richmond Knights of Pythias will attend. There will be representatives from almost every lodge in the state and a special train will run from Oakland for the benefit of anyone wishing to attend.

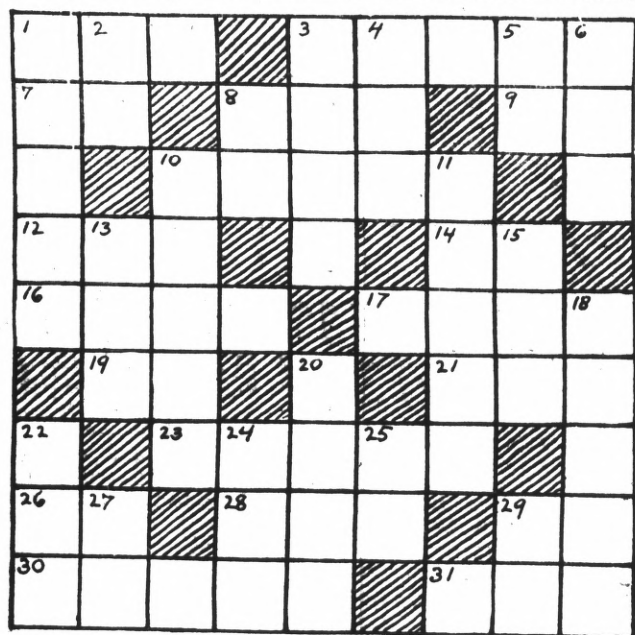

M. Siosilo, Chancellor, Commander, presided over the meeting of Richmond Lodge, No. 13, Knights of Pythias, held last night at Pythian Castle, at which time a partial report was made on the Grand Lodge held recently, by the delegates, George M. Deathe, R. M. Fernald, R. E. Cox, and E. G. Blackhart.

On next Wednesday evening, the lodge will be called at 7 p. m. so that it may be adjourned early as the members of the lodge are to attend a banquet and entertainment to be given in their honor by Scout Troop, No. 4, at the Scout home in Ohio. The Knights of Pythias sponsor this troop.

The game has been scheduled, by the Spaulding company, who have an eye on a good many teams about the bay and always match the teams evenly. The Merchants are reputed to be good, but the Firemen are known to be equally as good so the least that can be expected is a tight game. Chief Cooper, manager of the local nine, stated that his old line-up would again be in the field.

THE STORY THUS FAR

Life was a drab routine for Leo Bewlay, an English beauty who had driven an ambulance in the war, until she meets Richard Valoran. He was a concert singer and possesses all the sensitiveness and temperament that is rightfully associated with the creative mind.

Leo meets Valoran on the continent and they go for a holiday to Switzerland. After several days of romantic lovemaking in a little chalet tucked away in the Alps they go on a climb up the Kleine Scheidegg. Poor Knapsacks on their backs, stout open stocks in their hands the two lovers pass through the little town and with much blarney and a few giggles start up the mountainside.

The mountain railway's quaint little train would deposit them at Grindelwald. No hitch occurred during the first mile or so. Then, abruptly, the train stopped. The sound of men's voices, mingled with metallic knocking and tapping, caused heads to be thrust out and conjectures to pass to and fro in the open, truck-like carriages. Presently the voices and noises ceased, and the train began to move slowly backward. Before it had retraced a quarter of the distance, however, it stopped again. The voices, tappings, unanswered conjectures, were repeated until at last, deciding that nothing after all was really wrong, the train forged once more ahead.

About an hour had been wasted. Val turned this to account by frighening a German sitting opposite with lurid tales in his own tongue of accidents on the mountains. Leo backed these up with fearful surmises and furtive giggles. Thus the hour, whose loss was one of Fate's wildest, wantonest strokes in both their lives, was lightly thrown away.

The very polite concierge who took their luggage to the hotel offered to phone for rooms at the one inn up the Kleine Scheidegg Pass. That would insure "a welcome," he said, in his suave broken Swiss. "You will start, ah! once, you seem to the hotel first? No? It will be all right. Leave everything to me. Es ist ein—ein—" At a loss for English, he waved his arms to express the height they had to traverse.

Val gave some brief directions in German. But German is not quite the same as Swiss. The concierge, like most valuable people, was not an over-attentive listener. Val's directions were usually vague.

Knapsacks on their backs, stout openstocks in their hands, they passed through the little town to the mountain path leading toward the lower flanks of Elger and Monch. A tiny cog-and-pinion railway ran almost parallel on a high slope on their left, but this, in their youth and strength, they scorned. Though the pastures were thick with flowers, the world of snow was very near now. It scintillated as far down as the railway line, and in patches, yet lower. Higher up a ring of puffy clouds resembled nymphs in pale, trailing draperies creeping slowly round Eger's crest and a distant peak of the Jungfrau. Away to the right stretched another lower ridge, its green peaks tipped only here and there with white, as if a glacial painter had dropped occasional splashes from his tubes of white paint. High above, but straight ahead, the pass for which they were making formed a white skyline, sharply silhouetted against a vividly blue sky.

An ominous rumble like thunder reverberated among the mountains, growing louder, nearer, until a final clap rang out seemingly above their heads, followed by a strange, continuous roaring sound. They were sitting close under the bank of the railway, on a kind of ledge which shelved down fairly precipitately into a grassy dip of some six feet. Val had scrambled to his feet at the final clap.

"An avalanche—some where near—" He looked quickly round, but the bank just behind him the lower part of the peaks beyond, from the side of which the avalanche had fallen, it is seldom easy to locate the sound in time to watch the beginning of these terrific landfalls of snow. Before either of the pair had become aware of his own danger the sky was veiled in whirling masses of white; their ears were deafened by the crash of wooden palisades and telephone posts, the roar of metal being ripped up, the rushing of a mighty torrent—a force that swept away all the puny atoms in its path.

Out of some vague, far-off place, Leo's mind came back to a realization of movement—a strange, swaying movement. Opening her eyes, she tried to rise, but a stabbing pain in her head caused her to fall back. The movement abruptly ceased. Val's face appeared, very white, a blood-stained handkerchief round his forehead. Too much effort was needed to comprehend his agitated broken words. She felt something hard upon her lips, and struggled against the smell and taste of brandy. Then everything became blurred, and she felt horribly sick. She closed her eyes and lay quite still.

Some buildings loomed up with startling suddenness, before which the back of a strange man's head bobbed curiously. "Punny!" she thought aloud. Again Val's face—hot and flushed now—bent above her own. "We are nearly there. It's all right," he said.

In a flash memory returned—the crash, the roar, the dizzy whirl of snow over the railway bank, the ineffectual grip of Val's hand, the moment's horror upon losing foothold and balance. . . . Somebody was helping him to carry her on a rough wooden plank up the railway track. When she moved, an agonizing pain gripped her right foot. She felt extraordinarily giddy.

"Aren't you hurt, Val?" she muttered. "Only some scratches." "What happened to me—after—?"

"A piece of wood from the railway palisades caught you—you let go—" He stopped, and she realized vaguely that his voice was unsteady. "The main bulk had blocked the line. Only the last bit came over. . . . Luckily this man was not far off. . . ."

The strangely husky voice trailed away again. Leo lay inert, looking around the mountain world she had wished to penetrate. In her present condition she felt almost appalled by the majesty of silence. The footfalls of the two men sounded uncannily distinct. From the far, far distance rose a faint sighing sound that might have been the breathing of the human world below, where a myriad pines whispered, and waterfalls fell softly. It was evidently evening. All the white crests gleamed golden where the long shafts from the setting sun crossed them; the shadows were slate gray.

The sound of mortal voices near the hotel, and the sight of their figures, seemed almost incongruous. They looked ridiculously small, drab, unimportant. From the proprietor to the boot-boy, men cropped up in rabbit-like profusion peculiar to continental hotels. Val laid his burden down on the wide veranda, while he held a brief consultation with the proprietor and the concierge. Then he bent over Leo.

"There's no doctor up here. The telephone wires are broken by the avalanche, and the last train was down the other line to Lauterbrunnen an hour ago. Leo—he laid his hand over hers—"I understand first aid—"

"Send all those staring people away, Val!" Reaction was overtaking the girl's highly-strung nerves; she spoke impatiently, clutching his hand, struggling against a wild desire to cry. "Don't let any of them mess round me."

"No—no. Can you sit up?" He dropped on his knees and passed an arm beneath her shoulders, gently raising them. "I want to carry you straight to your room. Tell me if I hurt."

With a strength that surprised her he lifted her into his arms, and followed the proprietor through the door of the hotel, up a twisting flight of shallow stairs, along a corridor and into a large room already nearly dark. Here the man switched on the light and vanished. Val laid the girl on the bed. Then, for a moment, the strain of the past hours relaxed. He forgot his habitual guard. The clasp of his arms tightened, and he bowed his face upon her hair, muttering brokenly her name.

She moved her head, in part because the pressure of his arm was painful, in part with the instinct to comfort. At once his lips were pressed to her own. Beyond a vague idea that he was, like herself, unaltered, she had no time to wonder at his unusual manner before he started up again at a movement in the room. A woman had entered with bandages, jars of ointment and embrocation.

With an effort he regained his self-control, sat down on the bed, and began to unlace Leo's boots. She buried her face in her hands to hide its wining at every lightest touch.

The woman could talk nothing but German, and seemed loath to employ much of that. Val cursed her silently for a sheep. She showed no initiative beyond fetching a basin and a can of hot water. He sent her for another of cold. The ankle of Leo's right foot was swelling rapidly, and discolored lumps made shapeless the knee. The right wrist was sprained slightly, but no bones were broken. The woman, set to attend to the wound on the girl's head, seemed hypnotized by Val's face and deft fingers as he attended to the other injuries. She allowed water or embrocation to trickle down unheeded into Leo's neck; until she cried out in remembrance.

"Her fingers are like sandpaper," she said. "Send her away." He knelt down by the bed and passed his fingers over her temples, and she closed her eyes. "Your touch is wonderful, Val. Send that woman away, if you have finished. Tell her we don't want her any more."

Rashly, without forethought, he acceded to her request. The woman gathered together her cans and departed, muttering sulkily something neither could understand.

"How wonderfully still it seems—not a sound!" the girl murmured, half to herself, watching him.

"We are the only visitors at present," he replied, going to the window to look out at the mountain peaks in the gathering dusk. "It's early yet, for these heights."

From where she lay, she could see nothing but snow, snow, endless snow, above which a few early stars twinkled in the darkening sky.

"It is rather weird," she turned her aching head restlessly on the pillow. "We might be at the North Pole together—just you and I. I have never felt such isolation, such helplessness."

Val turned back from the window, and looked down at her flushed face. He also was conscious of a terrifying sensation of helplessness, though not of the kind she meant. All the mirage of self-confidence seemed to be fading, as the Alpengluhen faded their first night on Thun.

"You . . . I forgot—you ought to go to bed. That woman—"

"No—no. Don't fetch her back—yet."

There came a knock at the door, and the proprietor appeared. In the background hovered waiters with trays. In slow and careful English the man explained that the dinner-hour being long past, he had ordered a little supper to be brought for "Madame"—two little suppers, in case they liked to have them together.

Leo drew a sigh of relief. Her nerves felt strangely unaltered. She was conscious of a childish dread of being left, a shrinking from more attempts to move.

"I must find my room, and wash first," Val protested, as the waiters entered with their dishes. But she caught hold of his homespun jacket. "Not now—while these men are about—"

"Yes, but—oh, dash! the proprietor has disappeared."

"You can wash over there—at my washstand—"

"But—" Conscious of her clutching fingers, he hesitated, glancing irresolutely at the one remaining waiter. Then, abruptly, he drew his jacket free and asked for his room. The man looked mystified. He was new, he explained in French. He did not know about the rooms.

"Blockhead!" The waiter bowed himself out, not understanding this word, but feeling retreat the safest procedure. Val strode across to the washstand and seized the jug. "Hello!" he exclaimed. "There's another bed here, behind the door. I didn't see it before. Would you rather have it?"

"This will do," she replied indifferently.

For a few moments he splashed vigorously at the cuts on his forehead caused by flying bits of stone, and the cold water acted as a tonic to his unaltered nerves. He turned round, drying his hands. "If that bally train to Grindelwald had not jibbed, we should have escaped the—Hello! Both our handbags are in here."

"The porter didn't know the difference, of course."

An uneasy suspicion of what had happened caused a hot flush to overspread his face. "Leo—I—must go and find the proprietor."

"Why? Your dinner will be cold. Come and have that first!" She glanced up at his tall form, and the damp hair clustering in its attractively boyish way about his ears and brow. His sudden flush seemed to her, as it had done the night before, that of embarrassment. And it enhanced him in her eyes—sent his pedestal up several inches higher. She stretched out her hand.

"Come along and eat. If I weren't the corpse I should be enjoying this funeral. It's quite a little adventure."

Governor of Virginia at Dedication of Home of George Washington's Sister as National Shrine

Kenmore, the 150-year-old home of Betty Washington Lewis, sister of George Washington and wife of Colonel Fielding Lewis, was the scene of a colonial fête when it was dedicated as a national shrine.

In the presence of a distinguished gathering, this photograph, taken at Fredericksburg, Va., shows Governor L. Lee Trinkle with a group of children who were dressed in colonial costumes.

RICHMOND HOMESTEAD HAS SOCIAL EVENING

Besides transaction of all regular business, a social, dance and banquet were enjoyed by the members of Richmond Homestead, No. 8111, Yeomen, at a meeting held in Mission hall last night. Lela Carey presided over the business meeting, which Mrs. Marie Dancy was in charge of the sumptuous banquet which was served. The music for the occasion was provided by Miss Vivian DeSoto.

During the business meeting plans were formulated for a joint meeting of all the Yeomen lodges at the bay on July 1, at which time a crack picked team from all the lodges will perform the rituals in connection with the great class initiation to be held. The Richmond lodge members on this team were selected last evening.

CHAUTAUQUA PROGRAM OPENS

"Daddy Long Legs" at Chautauqua
Jean Webster's Well Known Story to Be Presented by Elias Day Players.

"Daddy Long Legs," dramatization of America's favorite story by Jean Webster, which has become a national classic, is to be one of the many star offerings of this season's Chautauqua. It will be presented by the Elias Day Players with a cast of finished artists that will leave nothing to be desired in impersonation, delineation of character, and stage settings. Donna Voorhees, dainty, vivacious and quick witted, will make an ideal Judy, the orphan who escaped from the dread children's home through adoption by an unknown benefactor. Jervais Pendleton, who is the Daddy Long Legs of Judy's good fortune is to be played by Mr. Lawrence Johns, former director of the Civic Theater Company, Akron, Ohio, and stage manager at the Chronicle and Allen Theaters in Cleveland. Mr. Johns made a distinctive success last year in his Canadian tour and is especially adapted to the part of Daddy.

Progress Of Hotel Plans Told 'At Meet Of Committee

The Community Hotel campaign is progressing very satisfactorily, according to chairman H. A. Johnston who was well pleased with the results of the report at yesterday's meeting. A number of the groups of the committee made reports and interesting expressions in connection with the hotel were exchanged.

Edward M. Downer, a member of the campaign executive committee, and president of Richmond's Community Hotel, Inc., which organization is starting a campaign to get for Richmond a modern and attractive hotel, believes that the new hotel will have much to do with the further development of Richmond. He says: "Roger Edson, the widely known expert on business and finance, said recently: 'During the next ten years we will witness a municipal race; yes, a great municipal marathon race. The cities which are now behind will have an opportunity of getting in the front ranks, while some of the cities now in the front ranks will drop back into lower places. The results of the race will depend upon the vision of those who direct the affairs of these cities.'"

"B. C. Forbes, another great authority, asks this question: 'What is the best advertisement, the strongest magnet any city can have?' The same analyst then proceeds to answer his own question. He says: 'After traveling the country over, I am inclined to think the answer is a modern outstanding hotel.'"

"The hotel," said Mr. Downer, which Richmond is going to have, is an evidence that the business men of Richmond have a vision which will assure for our city a place in the front ranks. Vision, as I understand it, does not consist in going ahead for something blindly without a good idea of why you are going. Leading citizens of Richmond and our Chamber of Commerce have made a thorough and comprehensive investigation of the hotel needs of Richmond, and they are satisfied that Richmond must have a modern, first-class hotel if she is to keep her place in the front ranks with other cities. The business men working for the community-owned hotel have faith in the future of our city. Every citizen who has faith will rally round the campaign organization and assure the project of success. If we all work hard and pull together and boost for Richmond and her new hotel, we will have a successful campaign and the hotel will be assured."

Doctor Honored For Discovering Yosemite Valley

(By Universal Service)

YOSEMITE, CAL., May 19. The doctors took all credit for discovery of Yosemite valley for their profession here today, when they unveiled a bronze memorial, opposite El Capitan rock, to the memory of Dr. Lafayette Houghton Bunnell.

It seems that Dr. Bunnell was the medicine man who accompanied the military expedition that in 1851 set out to punish the Yosemite Indians for scalping some white folks down near the San Joaquin valley the year before.

The rest of the party was so busy killing and punishing Yosemite Indians that everyone but Dr. Bunnell overlooked the beauties and the wonders of Yosemite valley. Dr. Bunnell made ample notes of these wonders and wrote a book about them, as the result of which he was hailed as the real discoverer of Yosemite.

The bronze medallion to his memory was presented on behalf of the California Medical Association, in convention here, by Dr. Granville MacGowan of Los Angeles, president of the society.

Addresses were given by Superintendent W. B. Lewis of Yosemite National Park, Francis P. Farquhar of San Francisco, well-known student of high Sierra lore, and Dr. Emmet Rixford, of San Francisco, whose activities led to the establishment of the memorial. The plaque was placed on a rock at the first camp site of the 1851 expedition.

After this ceremony the convention divided into groups to discuss the "electrocoagulation and electro-desiccation," "scurvy vulgaris," "the surgical treatment of echinococcosis," and certain other technical problems confronting the convention.

The principal speakers at the next general session, on Wednesday, will be Dr. Starr Jordan, chancellor emeritus of Stanford University, who will speak on "science versus ignorance."

E. A. Burg, a member of the committee, told the committeemen that one insurance company had promised to have one of their men who handles business in this territory stop here at least three days every other week after the new hotel was erected and also told of personal experiences of out-of-town property owners seeking accommodations here so that patronage from unexpected sources was bound to develop. Larkin J. Younce, general sales manager, stated that only eighteen men were needed to complete the organization of 152 and that it would be 100 per cent complete within a short time.

WATER SUPPLY TOPIC OF TALK AT KIWANIS CLUB

Dr. George C. Pardee was the speaker at the Kiwanis club luncheon yesterday. He told of the supply, source, control and distribution of water, and spoke of past experiences, present condition, and reasonable expectancy of the future.

A short and interesting talk was given by Ernest Lucas, San Diego international field representative of Kiwanis.

A fine stunt was gotten off on Pardee by J. J. Barry, sergeant at arms of the club. An encounter with some bears in Alaska was told in a humorous way by Frank Ketchum, chairman of the day. George Lee did his duty by collecting times that had been due many years. Among those penalized were A. C. Lang, Judge John Roth, Earl Esola, Frank Ketchum, and John B. Sullivan. The attendance price hung up by Ralph

The First Baptist church is sponsoring the mission and members and friends are invited to assist.

Flapper, Divorcee, Widow Analyzed On "Popularity Peak"

SACRAMENTO, May 20.—Feminine popularity in California was gauged, analyzed and tabulated today, and the net result is that single girls reach the peak of attractiveness at the age of 18 years, that divorcees are most adorable at 28 and that widows possess their greatest attractiveness at 40.

The pulse of feminine charms was taken by L. E. Ross, director of the state bureau of vital statistics, who presented his decision with the statement that "wedding records are the best evidence of feminine popularity." The single girl reaches the flapper age and the age of popularity simultaneously. Ross declared the records show that girls who never have been married are most attractive between the ages of 16 and 18 and that after 19 their popularity comparatively speaking, wanes.

In proof of this pronouncement, the state statistician produced figures showing that girls who reached the so-called "popularity age" during the last year were more successful than any others in finding husbands. Wedding bells rang for 6,225 girls of 18, the "popularity peak." Maidens of 16 and 17 proved almost equally alluring, but the marriage rate dropped for single girls over 18.

Ross said that divorcees are always popular in California, but that at the age of 28 they are most sought after by love-lorn swains. Three of them, however, came out of divorce court in the past year and remarried at the age of 16. The oldest divorcee to marry was 74.

At 40 a widow is apparently irresistible, according to Ross' records, which reveal that 280 of them married again during the year. At no period of life, either younger or older, did widows prove so popular. But 19 of them nonetheless, managed to find new mates at 70.

The youngest California bride of the year was a maid of 13 and the oldest was a widow of 85.

TOURISTS SEEK GOOD HOTEL ACCOMMODATIONS

A housewife was shopping at a market in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, the home of the thrifty, industrious Pennsylvania Dutch. The customer was complaining because selections were poor; that the choicest had already been taken (it was then 9 o'clock in the morning). In reply the matronly stall-keeper answered in her rich, Pennsylvania Dutch accent, "Vell, what comes early, gets!"

Literally translated, she meant that those who shopped early got the choicest selection.

How many cities throughout the country complain because tourists and travelers step on the gas when they reach their community! They are hurrying on to better hotel cities; the cities that have "gotten up early" have built new, modern and distinctive hotels to attract the ever-increasing throng of free-spending tourists.

Right now tourists travel routes are being moulded. They are being moulded "from hotel to hotel." True, these routes follow the arteries of improved highways, but if a city, our city, hasn't a modern hotel to offer, there isn't a chance in the world of having the American auto tourist slow up when the sign boards tell him he has reached our city limits and turn off to find a hotel. He is going to make the next town, where he can be assured of a comfortable night's sleep and service in a new, modern and progressive hotel.

We must get the tourist into the habit of stopping in our city because we can offer convenient hotel facilities, free from traffic congestion of the large city and with first-class service at lower rates.

"What comes early, gets!"

The point I want to put over is that 100 cents of the tourist dollar goes to business men of the state, and that there is no other dollar spent by any class of people that benefits the state so much as the one left by the tourist. Richmond is going to get her share of the traveling public's dollar.

UBIQUITOUS BARLEYCORN

FEDERAL prohibition officers in southern California are not justified in their expressed belief that the vigorous blockade on the Atlantic seaboard has driven the rum traffic to the west. There has been no time to transport the rather cumbersome machinery of whiskey smuggling during the short week of the east coast blockade.

Nor has there been opportunity for the big bootleggers of New York and New Jersey to rush west with the star of empire and make the secret and intricate connections necessary to establishment of the traffic.

California must admit that it has its own bootlegger quietly at work. It is no imported law-breaking that now disturbs the dry agents.

It seems practical that the only solution to the smuggling problem is to ring the Union in steel, covering all its seacoast and redging its land boundaries with watchers. But that is not practical at all, when considered in the light of costs. It will be found far more practical to enforce the laws within the border than to establish watches along it.

Gradual tightening of the interior law enforcement, infliction of stiffer penalties, linking the consumer with the peddler in a conspiracy to defeat the law and going after him earnestly and swiftly will do more to stop the traffic than the guarding of the lines, where the lines are so long and so lonely.

Natural forces will, of course, set themselves in motion to discourage rum traffic. The big trade will be found at or near centers of population, for any product, legitimate or not, seeks its market as the needle turns to the pole. And, happily, it is more convenient to throw strict patrols along populous coasts than to place them at isolated places. The transportation hazards of the rum industry will assert themselves on the side of the law.

Lately the tendency to punish the drinker has been to increase in states. This movement will grow and should be assisted to grow by all who have the due respect for the law at heart. Law observance, even more than law enforcement will be the key to the liquor problem.

It is not generally known that the federal statutes place a powerful weapon in the hands of the officers if they would only use it. Nowhere is bootlegging or possession more serious as an offense than petit larceny—a misdemeanor for all first and even for the bulk of repeated offenses. But conspiracy even, to commit a misdemeanor can be punished severely as a felony by the district courts and many state courts.

The felt hat persists despite its unpopularity with many milliners. A new black felt hat for Easter was considered an amusing innovation in Paris a few weeks ago.

Bright straw hats trimmed with gorgeous flowers may do very well if you like them, but there are women who when it comes to selecting their own hats, are as particular as little trimmed as possible.

Yet a milliner, expert tells us that both American and French milliners realize that the small, little trimmed felt hat has worked a revolution with their patrons. They say that the craze for the small felt hat has almost bankrupted a number of the French millinery houses. Realizing this, the milliners, here there and elsewhere, are eager to show more elaborate hats that won't stand in the way of the small felt hat.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

SETTING THE FASHION IN GRAPEFRUIT

Most Americans have become so used to grapefruit that we take it for granted as a matter of course, and think no more of having a half grapefruit for the first course, or breakfast, or the last course, or lunch, than of having an orange or a banana. We do not consider grapefruit a special delicacy, with a special grapefruit to be in many of its best special grapefruit spots. The cook of a general housewife who doesn't know how to prepare grapefruit for the table is considered very green indeed.

In England at the present time grapefruit is still something of a novelty. With the recent craze for health, it has become very much more widely known than formerly, and people still speak of the eating of grapefruit as a characteristic of Americans. The English business who entertains American guests feels that she must set grapefruit for them because they expect upon this fruit. However, we are told that the sort of grapefruit that one usually gets in England is very small compared to the American variety.

It is not often that we Americans have the pleasure of setting the standards in any sort of table manners. Quite often in fact the English notion is that the American way of eating anything is bad manners, just because it is American—and not English. Our American manner of eating a soft-boiled egg is considered a barbarism. But with grapefruit we had the advantage of getting it first. We evolved a manner of serving and eating it so sensible and generally satisfactory that others seem to be following suit. Having cut the fruit directly in two, we cut the connecting filament neatly and deftly with a curved knife, and when we come to eat it at the table we are spared the embarrassment of having grapefruit juice squirt in our eyes.

WHERE IT STARTED

MOVIES

Altogether, when you consider any thing from a different point of view, there is a certain amount of truth in the saying, "where it started." When you consider the movies, you are reminded of the words of an old English proverb, "where it started, there it ended." But it was undoubtedly Tom.

She hurried toward him, an eager greeting on her lips, and there in the midst of the obdurate throng on the Boardwalk, she stopped him.

"Oh Tom, dearest, I'm so glad to see you."

He had seen her coming, and it seemed almost as though he wished to avoid her. But as she spoke, his face brightened, and he turned to her with a smile.

"You're looking better than ever," he said, "but you're still a little out of breath."

"I'm not out of breath," she said, "I'm just a little out of breath."

"You're looking better than ever," he said, "but you're still a little out of breath."

"I'm not out of breath," she said, "I'm just a little out of breath."

Tell The World

You're Proud to Live IN RICHMOND

SURELY, you have all the reason in the world to be thankful you live in Richmond. Your commercial interests are here. Your social interests are here. Your prospects here are far more promising than they would be anywhere else. Nary a cloud hovers on the horizon of your future. Could things look any brighter?

Compare Richmond with New York, Chicago, or any of the larger centers of the country. There it is — "Everybody for himself. Get what you can and the best of luck." It's hustle, hustle every minute with never a thought or a kind deed for a neighbor's welfare.

How different the spirit is here. Your neighbor's interests are your own. He thinks—"What can I do to please others? What can I do to help improve the town, help it grow and make it a better place in which to live?" Your thoughts are the same. And through your actions and his actions, Richmond has become the best place in the world.

Population doesn't make a great community. It's the spirit of those who live in it.

So, do a little "Oral Boosting" Tell the world you're mighty happy to be here.

Milton Sills "I Want My Man"
"I Want My Man"
At The California

How will the future Judge of America in its present era of social dissolution which came as a reaction to the anxiety and agitation of the last war?

That is the question evoked by Milton Sills and Doris Kenyon in their latest First National drama, "I Want My Man," which opened last night at the California theatre.

Will they see it with the eyes of Sills in his role of Julian Eyre—a man returning after eight years' seclusion in France, during which he was seeking cure from blindness incurred in the war?

To Sills it is world up-ended, a world of flapper orgies, of teardancing matrons and reckless fathers. But beneath it all, he sees, there is that soundness of heritage that will emerge above the phase of pleasure-madness that prevails.

As Earl Hudson has produced it, "I Want My Man" is well acted.

well directed and well told. It is a drama well worth seeing, with a story of weight and moment. The film was adapted from Struthers Burt's novel, "The Interpreter's House."

Other features on the same program include "Excuse My Glove," a Spat Family comedy; "Enchanted Valley," a Bruce scenic; International News; Larry Canelo at the organ.

Plans have now been completed for the big public whist party to be held in Musicians' hall on next Monday evening by the Fraternal Brotherhood. The committee in charge has provided numerous attractive prizes which will be awarded to high score winners, and they promise an enjoyable evening to all who attend.

"Three Weeks" At Richmond Theatre

A new motion picture which should rank right at the top, with the best that the industry affords, is Goldwyn's screen version of Elinor Glyn's sensational novel, "Three weeks," which was seen last night at the Richmond theatre and proved to be one of the most beautiful of screen offerings. Mrs. Glyn has given the public her word that she is entirely satisfied with the picture and, judging from the impression it made upon the audience at the Richmond theatre, the public at large is going to be thoroughly satisfied with it, too.

The story of "Three Weeks" recounts the love romance that came to the Queen of Sardinia and the young Englishman, Paul Verdayne. The Queen paid for her transgression of the laws of man by her death, at the hands of her dissolute husband, but Paul, her lover, through his deep and enduring affection for her made of his life a monument to her character and her influence. The story is told in the photoplay with a wealth of detail, a vividness of acting and an analytic presentation of the love passion which will insure the screen version a much wider popularity than the book itself enjoyed. Praise, in no uncertain measure is due to Alan Crosland, the director; Cedric Gibbons, Goldwyn's art director who designed the simple and beautiful sets, and John J. Mescall, the head

Lincoln School
Gives Program

With the auditorium well filled with interested fathers and mothers, the Lincoln P. T. A. and Lincoln school children presented a splendid program last evening. W. T. Helms, superintendent of schools, spoke the words of welcome in an interesting talk. Helms also spoke of the value of a Parent-Teacher association and the things it has accomplished, Aubrey Wilson also gave an address on this subject.

The program which was participated in only by the children of the school, consisted of musical numbers, a health play and a number of readings. A chorus composed of the boys of the Sixth grade provided the feature of the program with several selections.

Roosevelt Junior
Student Body Head

Cale Ramey will be the student body president of Roosevelt Junior high school next year. He was elected to that position yesterday in a special assembly. He was chosen for the office by a substantial majority.

Other features on the same program include "What A Night," a Lige Conley comedy; "Prizma," a screen ority over Nat Damon, Heloise Head, Francis LeVeque, Harvey Stender and Robert Van Fleet.

Harold Fitzpatrick was chosen vice-president over Dante Bonini, Cle-Nelson and Harry Williams.

In the secretarial election Lloyd Hall and Helen Maxwell received an equal number of votes as did Anita Brown and George Page in the election of a treasurer. The election of these officers will take place this afternoon.

PARIS, May 20.—Complaints by American tourists of the execrable train service between Cherbourg and Paris have at last been hearkened to by the French State railroad officials and trains de luxe will soon run in place of the present cheerless expresses, according to an announcement here.

Modern hotels, properly managed, properly built and financed, especially those in growing communities, have proved paying investments.

Richmond's New Fire Proof Hotel, WILL be modern and attractive; it WILL be properly managed; it WILL be properly built and financed; and it WILL be located in a growing community. Of all these facts we are certain.

If we have faith in the future of our City of Richmond, surely we have faith that our new hotel will at least prove equally as successful as those located in other less progressive and less advantageously situated cities.

THE THOUSANDS OF VISITORS

who will be attracted to Richmond's New Hotel, by reason of its accessibility and service, demand the best and are well able and willing to pay for it. Richmond's New Hotel will supply a service for which there is a demand waiting.

THE MANAGEMENT

of our New Hotel will be placed in the hands of the Hamilton Hotel Chain, at present successfully operating a chain of hotels in California. The only profit that can be derived from the operation of the hotel by this operating company will be half of the surplus profits, after you, as a stockholder, have received a 7 per cent dividend on your Preferred stock. The other half of the surplus profits will be available as a dividend on your common stock.

YOU DO NOT PAY CASH

for the stock purchased. Nine payments have been arranged to cover a period of nine months, at monthly intervals, the first twenty per cent (20 per cent) payment, cash, falling due June 15, 1925. This long term of payments has been arranged, knowing that a great number of Richmond's citizens will want to participate in the project, and also because the Hotel Committee does not want the stockholders to make their payments faster than the progress of the building demands.

DISCOVERY OF RUBBER MADE BY ENGLISHMEN

FIRST OF A SERIES OF ARTICLES ON RUBBER

By EDGAR C. RUYCK
Superintendent of Rust-Campbell Co.,
Richmond, Calif.

Because rubber is the most versatile of materials and because of the great number of uses to which it is put and its importance in the industrial world, a little of its history, its romance and its development may be of interest.

Late in the eighteenth century English sailors found natives of South America and of South Africa playing games with balls made of a substance having the quality of rebounding.

Specimens were taken to England, where it was discovered that by rubbing the marks by lead or graphite were erased, hence the name "rubber" and the prefix "Indian" not

India, because it was first used by Indians.

Chemically, rubber is a hydrocarbon, C₁₀H₁₆, that is composed of ten parts carbon and sixteen parts hydrogen. It is a natural product of the latex of certain trees and shrubs, and is found in many parts of the world.

For practical purposes, therefore, the definition given by the Rubber Board in India, "Natural Rubber is the latex of the tree Hevea brasiliensis, which is obtained by cutting the bark of the tree with a special knife, and is known as the 'rubber tree'." This definition is the basis of the present article.

The other physical properties of rubber are: softness, toughness, impermeability, adhesion, and elasticity.

Rubber is obtained from the latex of the rubber tree, which is a tree of many trees, shrubs and vines, and is found in the trunk, leaves, and wood of roots.

After the tree is cut, the latex is collected in a cup, and is then poured into a mold, where it is allowed to dry.

America furnish practically the world's supply of rubber for commercial uses. The valley of the Amazon river in South America, containing hundreds of thousands of square miles in Brazil, Bolivia and Peru, is the center of the South American rubber industry, and produces practically all of the world's rubber, and until the cultivation of rubber plantations, produced nearly all the rubber used.

The chief center of this market was in the city of Para, Brazil, and the name "Para Rubber" was given to the rubber which was obtained from the Hevea tree.

The rubber industry in this world country has been in a state of constant growth, and has been the cause of many problems, including the problem of the rubber tree, which is a tree of many trees, shrubs and vines, and is found in the trunk, leaves, and wood of roots.

The other physical properties of rubber are: softness, toughness, impermeability, adhesion, and elasticity.

Un-superstitious pedestrians often do this —Proving that a post can divide two people without splitting their friendship. In the same way experienced motorists have proved to their complete satisfaction that Zerolene, a western oil, will lubricate the modern automobile engine as well or a little better than any oil they can buy, although it costs less than eastern lubricants.

The anti-western oil superstition succumbs to experience

Zerolene is successfully lubricating more cars in the Pacific Coast states than any other oil made—low and high priced cars alike. The most advanced refining process is this Company's patented high-vacuum process, during the use of which Zerolene is submitted to 15 positive checks for quality. Zerolene's special filtration through 40 tons of Florida Fuller's Earth gives you an oil of absolute purity—a better oil if it does cost less!

Less carbon—better fuel mileage

Zerolene will increase the power and gasoline mileage of your car, reduce carbon accumulation in the cylinders and lengthen the working life of the engine.

Why pay tribute to a superstition? Insist on Zerolene—ask for it by name.

Get the Facts!

A series of independent and impartial reports showing the experience of large users with Zerolene has been collected in our booklet, "Why Pay Tribute to a Superstition?" Ask any Standard Oil Company representative or Zerolene dealer for a copy.

SHAM BATTLE REVEALED NAVY'S DEFICIENCIES AND WEAKNESSES OF HAWAIIAN DEFENSES, CLAIM

By LIEUT. J. PORTER.

(By Universal Service)

HONOLULU, May 19. Certain deficiencies in the Hawaiian Island defense and in the United States fleet were disclosed in the recent month-long sham battle between the attacking blues and the defending blacks.

This is the highlight of the statement issued here following a grand critique participated in by navy and army experts on the joint exercises designed to test the strength of the nation's strategic base in the Pacific and the power of the sea forces.

Just what these deficiencies are was not revealed in the statement signed by Admiral Robert L. Coontz, commander-in-chief of the fleet, and Major General John L. Hines, chief of staff of the army, chief umpires of the exercises.

The findings of these high officials, based upon the claims made by both sides at the critique, were forwarded to Washington for consideration and "corrective action."

The full text of the umpires' statement, upon which no official comment was made, follows:

"The problem in question was formulated by the joint board and was designed to test the existing plans and projects for the defense of Oahu, and to exercise the army and navy forces in the conduct of joint operations. The chief umpires state that it is their belief that these objects were accomplished."

"The Hawaiian Islands constitute the key to the Pacific. In this group Oahu is the only island possessing the natural features required by a permanent naval base. Our naval base is located there. All the defense forces and means for the protection of this naval base are concentrated on this island."

"It must be realized that it is impossible to fortify all the other islands of the Hawaiian group. Hence the necessity of making the resisting power of Oahu of the strongest possible character."

"The problem in question, which really lasted from the date of the sailing of the fleet from San Francisco bay, April 15, 1925, to noon, April 27, 1925, naturally brought out certain deficiencies not only in the island defenses, but in the fleet itself. These various points have been brought out in the critique at which 800 officers of the army and navy daily attended, and have been made the subject of a special report to the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy. It is presented that when this report reaches Washington, action on the report will be taken by the secretary, and that later on, it will, if approved, form the basis for such corrective action as may be indicated.

"The chief umpires were impressed with the great amount of painstaking work done in preparing for the exercise and the keen interest displayed in carrying it to a successful conclusion. They have recommended that a grand joint army and navy exercise be held annually and in conclusion take this occasion to congratulate both services upon the skill and judgment of officers and men which enabled them to carry out an exercise of such magnitude, composed as it is of complicated and in many instances dangerous details, with so few casualties to material and to personnel."

"That Pearl harbor, while naturally of the highest merit, has inadequate facilities of approach for big ships, was one of the points stressed by Rear Admiral McDonald, commander of the Fourteenth Naval district, and by several of the visiting congressmen in talks here during the week. The dreadnaughts and cruisers of the fleet, it was pointed out, were compelled to lie far off the beach at Honolulu, because of lack of proper approach channels and facilities within. Pearl harbor, the speakers urged, should be developed so that ships of the first line could sail in and out with safety and dispatch."

Whether or not there ever is any official decision as to the victor in this greatest sham battle of history and in spite of the opposing claims of both sides it served its purpose well, observers say, in bringing the branches of the nation's defense together in a master piece of co-ordinate efficiency.

Former Candidate For Governor Kills Self in Sacramento

(By Universal Service)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., May 20. The body of C. D. Patterson, 35, a candidate for governor in 1920, was found in an automobile late today under circumstances which caused police to declare him a suicide.

His throat had been slashed and the razor was lying beside the body in the car. The machine was parked along a road in what is known as the "Pocket district," six miles southwest of this city.

His wife declared she knew of no motive that would cause her husband to commit such a deed.

Patterson, owner of a laundry here and considerable property, ran on an independent ticket in 1920 for the gubernatorial honors. One of his planks was a bachelor's tax.

OUR PROUD REPUTATION

That the Purity Creamery of Richmond is one of the best conducted and most sanitary plants in the state was the opinion of speakers who sponsored the new milk ordinance before the city council at its meeting this week.

Dr. Blake and others spoke in high terms about the local creamery which is said to have passed all state inspections with high scores under the pure food act. It has always merited the very best reports, it was said.

Good for old and young, but particularly for the young. Milk makes blood, bone, sinew, muscle. It helps the weak to grow strong, but it must be pure to be good. Our dairy products are famous for their purity and nutritious properties. Try them and be convinced.
